How to Use This Book

This book has been created to integrate the occasion of the "Hundredth Day of School" with important skills in the areas of Math, Language Arts, Science and Social Studies. Although these activities have been created especially for the Hundredth Day, they can be used throughout the year as students learn concepts of number. Ideas for use include:

- Center activities: All activities in this package are well-suited to classroom learning centers. Ensure that students have prior knowledge of the skill before starting centers. Centers should be used for practice rather than for new learning.
- New learning: Many activities can be used during whole-class or small-group instruction when learning a new skill, such as "Patterns in a Hundred Chart" or "100 Words - Word Sort."
- Easy substitute planning: Planning for a substitute teacher can be time-consuming. Consider leaving a few activities from this book for a day when you are away.
- Hundredth Day Bulletin Board Display: I have included items specifically for a Hundredth Day bulletin board display; however, many of the items in this book are well-suited to bulletin boards.

I hope you enjoy this book! Please consider leaving feedback for me regarding my work. Other products can be viewed at:
